X marks the spot, and the spot is here—

Wayne High School, 9100 Winchester Road, Fort Wayne Indiana. It is more than an address or a brick building; it is its own little earth, its own little society. A world, complete, whole, and real. A world separate from life's swirling activities but dependant products of its own masses of humanity. Life here is fun, we have our "soc's", "jocks", and "arts" all merging into one furious rainbow that was Wayne in 1977. Yes, there's color here at Wayne, but one must look close and deep. Not all the colors are bright and solid; many lie in that obscure gray area—tints of facts, pastels of reality. A reality that many wallpaper over with black each of us bright flags in the night, different facets carved into Wayne.

But in many ways our world at Wayne is not quite life size. It is a miniature golf course hidportant to onlookers, they are deep and real for us. Here we are.

Here are our laughs. Here are our tears. Here is our year. Live and real. 100% Wayne-mounted and framed.

The GLASS RENNAINS

Hi . . .

I just wanted to drop you this note to tell you how much I enjoyed seeing you today. I mean it's really great to have a friend like you—someone to talk to, complain about, to laugh and cry with. I take you for granted, that's for sure. A lot of people think you're kind of strange. But I guess that's what makes life interesting.

It's just neat being around you. You always have something funny to say and I love it when you break into that devilish grin of yours.

You are you, and I like you just as you are—patched-up jeans and that old dusty plaid shirt. Our friendship is warm and kind, most of the time. It's simply mellow.

See ya . . .

LEARNING

What do you learn here at Wayne? Do you learn anything? If you do, what does it mean?

Where do you learn it from? What do you get for learning it? What do you get from learning it?

Those questions were asked of two students and one teacher here at Wayne. The first story is written by a student on vacation in the outside world looking in. The second tale is told by a teacher looking through and beyond this same world. The third, by a student looking us in the eye.

Look them over.
Live them over.

ONE

When I was asked to write an opening for the yearbook, I accepted casually. After all, how hard could it be? And so I began. And began again. And again. And yet again. After surveying the debris, and musing on the unpleasant (yet somehow not unappealing) speculation that I might be a functional illiterate, I tossed all care to the winds. Spring vacation was coming and I was going to have fun or die trying.

After returning from my trip (a tour of Mexico City which is another essay entirely) I decided two things: first, that American teenagers are incredibly boring; and second, that American teenagers are some of the funniest people to be around.

I came to the first conclusion as we sat talking to a Mexican student. Here was this marvelous opportunity to further world understanding and promote brotherhood, etc., etc., right? And what did we talk about? WHAT WE DISLIKED ABOUT OUR HAIRSTYLES.

They are stolid middle American Babbits, who travel through another world by hauling THEIR entire world with them.

So it went, the entire week. At the pyramids: sunburn and the trauma of pale legs in the first shorts of the season. Museum of Anthropology: too dark for Instamatics. Basillica de Guadalupe: blisters and "what are you going to wear tonight?"

It appears that Americans are overly concerned with their appearance. With new experiences their adamant refusal to see the world as a rigid textbook, they are the most alive of any people bursting all around them, they are content to fret because they didn't bring a curling iron, or wonder if they need to shave their legs before going out. They are stolid middle-American Babbits, who travel through another world by hauling THEIR entire world with them.

And yet, these boring, exasperating, annoying, irritating, make-me-want-to-scream people are the most in the world, or of any in America.

We sat on a hot patio outside the Museum of Anthropology one day, two thousand miles from Hollywood, and entertained ourselves with our impressions of the Gong Show. The Mexican viewers had no idea of what we were doing, but laughed at the crazy American touristas anyway. And we laughed back, because we had triumphed over hot weather and warm Cokes and sore feet and WE WERE HAVING FUN. All by taking ourselves out of our immediate surroundings and making up our own. Who'd of thought of the Gong Show as entertainment?

TWO

We spend a lot of time together at Wayne over the space of four year's time—we in the education business. We give and take tests, assign and complete mountains of homework assignments. We all are happy on Fridays, cheer when vacation comes around, secretly dread Mondays, get totally bored during the summer, and are visibly saddened when we finally realize that some old friends, having graduated, are gone forever. But what does it mean? But what should it mean? And why are these not always the same?

It means that we are supposed to learn something, and it is hoped that on occasion we actually do—we in the education business. It is further hoped that some of what we learn has to do with the courses we take and give. And it is known

In questioning we push against our limits and, in pushing, expand our horizons.

In addition to giving us the atomic bomb, Albert Einstein gave us a different picture of our universe. According to Einstein, our universe that what teachers primarily teach and students primarily learn is how to be students. How to take tests. How to do homework. How to answer questions. How to live up to the expectations of others. How, in a word, to get along in a structured society. And this is valuable, but is it all?

No it is not. Life is not true-false, multiple choice, or even short essay, and a student's job is not to worship the known but to question it.

does not go on forever, but rather, at some point, space as we know it ends. It has an edge, but that edge is moving. Our universe, though finite, is growing, expanding into the void, becoming larger. This can also be seen as a picture of ourselves and the way we learn, for knowledge is personal—an unending adventure at the edge of uncertainty. We do not go on forever, but if we try, we can keep expanding into new areas of knowledge. All of us, students and teachers alike, must keep questioning and learning and expanding. The only tragedy is that occasionally some teachers stop expanding and some students never start.

Our expansion is also into the future. We learn in the present, of the past, for the future. We must be free to go easily with the waves of that future and disciplined enough to keep that future from becoming a nightmare. It is a tense and English philosopher A.N. Whitehead put it, "It is the business of the future to be dangerous." If this is true, then it is the business of education to be fearless and teach courage. We must learn as Little perfection biscuit girl, honey hair and a blue barette, sits on her blue shag carpet in her blue shoes and shoves a plant into her terrarium.

---

It rains, it shines, and is periodically sprinkled with bull.

She covers the roots, pours in crystal blue water, and places her carefully folded paper doll into her glass encased world, closes the lid, turns on the sunlamp and sits back in her blue suede chair, and waits for her green leaf of life to grow. Is she playing God . . . or teacher? Life at Wayne revolves in the cyclelike process of learning we call school. It rains, it shines and is periodically sprinkled with bull—Our blue suede teachers place our roots in the soil, prompting us to thrive, to grow, to soak up the minerals of knowledge. The “best” of us take hold, shoot up, grabbing at the sun only to feel the ceiling of glass covering us. We feel we’ve reached as far as we can go. We’re fully grown seniors, fully grown right to the level that you wanted us to reach.

Looking up we see the sun that we’ve been grabbing for, the basis for our growth. It’s only a G E Bulb, easily switched on or off. We question known facts, subjective truths and of course teachers.

Now what? We must be transplanted or thwarted. Many times an eerie feeling creeps up on me that our teachers are not on the outside ready to help transplant us but are caged into this glass world with us, likewise afraid to step right or left of the norm or they will shake the glass causing the looming hands of “Administrators” to quickly relocate their roots elsewhere.

Are our educators stoic wind-blown babblers or meek lions whispering an “ode to the west wind”—night and day, living with their own Frankenstein monster?

But what of those of us that don’t grow? Those that can’t separate the nutrients from the bull, can’t decipher the useable from the wasteful. We then are also like the water poured into the glass terrarium world. We seep down into our society, used by others, evaporated, risen to the top only to condense and fall again. We falter, carving through no new paths but always flowing the way of least resistance. We—like water drops—are not noticeable, yet we make up society.

There are those of us that neither shrink nor grow. Folded and molded by our teachers into nice little paper “student dolls”. Knowledge doesn’t seep into us, we wear it for all to see, newsprint declaring our intelligence. We stand straight, crisp, and easily readable in our terrarium world. But thrown into the gutter of “real” life?

Soaked with a society of water drop people—our ink runs, we sag and collapse. Waded, tossed away.

We live a real life inside this glass. We look out, others look in, but advocate change. Only those that are courageous are remembered or deserve to be.

Tired after finally no one breaks the wall.

It is the duty of each generation of Wayne stuand emerge. To find a cause and fight for it.

To oppose tradition, to breaking through, one realizes that life is like a ing experience at Wayne is one which is not planned and, in fact, is often opposed—to break the glass, to sound the alarm, to be the exception to the rule. For the exception both breaks and proves the rule, and that is, after all, what rules are for—to break and be broken.

THROUGH the GLASS DARKLY

Crossing the black depths of space—inner space—back to a time we remember only vaguely as through a glass darkly, through our own intimate impressions of the year.

That it what it is for.
For those of us who want to remember and be rememclassrooms.

To see their teachers.
To see their friends.
To smile and laugh.
To remember the tears,
to feel your friend's hands.

STATE OF TIMES

There is no such thing as too much or too little time, for time is not a thing but is a relation between things and activities. Too much time is the boredom of inactivity. Filled time is the full life of an active person.

GETTING HIGHER

very morning students pull themselves from their snug, safe dream world and go mechanically, if somewhat reluctantly, to school. Through sleet, snow, rain, and tempting stops along the way, students somehow make their way to school.

They come in all sorts of colors and wrappers. Big-yellow wrappers, light-green - tinted - glass - cellophane wrappers, shiny - silver - wrap - around - safety wrappers, and soft - red - flaking - rust wrappers, all churning into the parking lot, spilling people into Wayne. Pontiacs, Chevies, Fords, Buicks, and rusty VW's all lay cluttered among the shattered glass of the parking lot like ruins of a lost civilization.

But for others the trip is less adventuresome—a native recalls the journey.

Oh no! Here it comes, that crude form of public transportation they call "The Bus". Just the thought of getting on "The Bus" and going to school is so repulsive it makes my blood run cold, but I am already cold and standing here with my only friend in the world, my cello, and seeing "The Bus" creeping and sputtering over the hill, warms my chilly heart and chilly hands. It comes to a squeaky halt 20 feet from where I'm standing and, slipping and sliding over the iced terrain, I gingerly approach "The Bus".

Thinking I have finally made it I leap triumphantly intending to land in "The Bus", not in the hospital. My even less unfortunate "companion" slides under "The Bus", across the ice-covered road, and into the neighbor's yard where it is attacked fiercely by their dog, Manfred.

I approach slyly, notebook in hand, and, as I edge closer, Manfred shows his teeth. Keeping my knees from knocking together, I hurl my notebook and hit him right smack in the snout. He yelps for pain and retreats to the back of the house. Carefully picking up my cello, so not to cause any internal injuries, I look to see if "The Bus" is still there when I noticed my English term paper floating on the breeze, down the road, and out of sight. I decide to forget about my term paper, and college, and get to "The Bus" before it leaves without me.

Once on "The Bus" I discover there are few seats, and I sit up front, by the door, and freeze. My cello and I are jostled and jerked all the way to school which we reach after various breakdowns and near-miss accidents.

I am greeted with open arms and clenched fists by the mob, which I had insulted the day before by commenting on their taste in music.

Several abrasions and bruises later, I escape with my life and the life of my also bruised and abraded friend. I make it to the doors with no further incidents; only to find I can't open them, because I am loaded with books. So I set my cello down, open the door, quickly grab my cello and run through, or almost run through, as a gust of wind blows the door shut; my friend dischords in pain, his four strings taking leave of their pegs.

Now that I am in the building all I have to do is make it through the day alive.

THAT'S WHY HE'S COACH!

The NFL might have Fran Tarkenton and O.J. Simpson to make them strong, but Wayne's NFL has Mr. Stookey and captain Joe Andrew to keep them in the competition.

Wait! Wayne doesn't play for the National Football League, and anyway Mr. Stookey isn't a coach, or is he? He is the coach of the National Forensic League, usually referred to as the Wayne Speech Team.

The small, but very accomplished team worked many hours this year preparing for those once a week meets. Every Saturday morning, while most of us were snug in our beds, the speech team members awoke early and traveled to other schools to try to win a coveted trophy or ribbon.

"Because every one uses language to talk, everyone thinks he can talk about language." Not so. Robin Armstrong is one who can. She faired well with her on-the-spot, impromptu speaking. Hayden Schultz "lied" his way to many ribbons with his interpretation of Lonny Harper's "The Lie", and Jay Farlow hid behind a microphone, not because he was scared, but because he did radio broadcasting. The other members of the team Jenny Brown, Cris Burke, Mark Summers, Jackie Rencher, Greg Hicks, Karen Watson, and Russ Richeson, strongly supported their fellow teammates.

Half the team advanced to Regionals. Captain Joe Andrew advanced with his dramatic interpretation from "Romeo and Juliet." It was "to be" twelvth in state. While Mark Makin, star of "Scapino" showed versatility with his humorous speech, his interpretation from "Midsummer Night's Dream" received third in state, the best finish in the city.

(Rt.) At the State Speech Competition Mark Makin gladly accepts his third place trophy.

(Far Lt.) Looking at the ribbons and trophies Gail Smith remembers the help she gave the team members.

SHATTERED AND THE SHATTERING

Instead of promoting violence by launching an Atom bomb or shooting someone with an M-16, the Wayne High School Latin Club got THEIR kicks out of shooting gigantic Boulders across an open field. Silly you say? Well they didn't think so, and considering they again proved themselves National Catapult Champions, it seems they were right.

There is however, more than one way to throw a rock, and Wayne proved it by entering 10 different machines in 12 different categories. Wayne's star machine, the "Imperator" (Heavy weight, twisted rope, rock thrower) shattered our own National 10 pound stone record by more than 80 ft. with a walloping 544'11. Orbitas. Steve Smith's bentwood spear thrower, threw the spear 276', and the Joe Andrew, Joe Billman, and Hayden Schultz destructive engine Arculus threw the spear 178'¼ in. Steve Etter shined in the contest by breaking five national records with his Heavy Weight, bentwood, rock throwing machine, Magnus Ignis. Pila Ignis, a light weight, bentwood, rock throwing machine, set a new national record for Jeff Dohner with a toss of 170'6".

There was one last attempt by "Imperator" at heaving the giant 100-lb. rock. The sound of splintering wood shattering the air as the "Imperator's" arm landed with a sickening thud on the ground. Several attempts were made to rebuild the "Imperator", but, as the artist is never famous until he dies, so goes the legend of our mighty machine. His epitaph, like T.S. Eliot's could well read, "In my end was my beginning."

Et.) Bill Richards gets his spear throwing catapult ready for launching at the Nationwide Catapult Contest.

The auditorium filled slowly, as backstage the actors put the last minute touches on each other's costumes and make-up and tried to calm opening night jitters. Hushed whispers of "Break a leg" filled the air. Six weeks of rigorous rehearsals were about to come to a rewarding climax. As the house lights dimmed, the stage lights brightened and the crowd hushed. The play had begun.

Making his debut at Wayne, director James Garver brought new ideas and concepts to the six year old stage. The cast, comprised mostly of rookies was led by six veteran performers: seniors Linda Bushey, Gerry Durkee, Kevin Geren as well as juniors Anne Able, Hayden Schultz and Wendell Summers. In his first major role, junior Mark Makin nabbed the title role in the premiere production of the 1976-77 Drama Season. Junior Cris Burke also made a "splashing" entrance onto the Wayne stage.

DAMN

"YOU'VE GOTTA HAVE HEART"

The emotions, the turmoil. The lights, the crowd. The work of putting a production together. The time consuming rehearsals that make or break it. The time the cast of "Damn Yankees" didn't have, but put in anyway.

Those "Damn Yankees" brought music to our ears and a smile to our lips. Marking the fifth musical in Wayne's history, "Damn Yankees" featured the best of Wayne's talents. Hayden Schultz highlighted the play with his "devilish" portrayal of Mr. Applegate. While many rookies sprinkled the scenes with memorable performances. Teresa Paetz, who played the part of Lola, Applegates number one homewrecker, surely gave credit to the production. Making a smashing premiere was Lori Hicho who portrayed Gloria Thorpe the newspaper reporter. She also proved to be a talented choreographer, and vocalist.

Excelling performances were also given by Phil Steigerwald (Sohovik), Wendell Summers (Joe Boyd), Anne Able (Doris), Le Ann Krach (Sister), Bill Parr (Rocky), and Dave Henschen (Smokey).

The crew of "Damn Yankees" did a great job with the props, sound, and lighting. Without them there wouldn't have been a production.

Preparing for their future lives in the business world, many Generals join the Cooperative Office Education and Distributive Education sections led by Miss. Weaver and Mr. Howell.

COE is divided into two divisions General and Individual Instruction. The members learn everything from taking an interview, to filing, to solving actual problems on the job. Many members get a chance to show their skills on the job. Escaping from "wall to wall" boredom of the school, the group gets an advanced look at the outside world.

The DE club members also receive a sneak preview of the outside world, but while inside Wayne. The junior members work mainly with the Depot, the bookstore that was reconstructed this year. The store sells school supplies, novelty items, and candy. The COE and DE are an invaluable, educational experience for many students with futures as secretaries, business consultants, and office workers giving them an edge in the business "Rat Race".

Future activities: DE classes hope to have a booth at Southtown Mall to promote DECA. Also planned in the near future is an ad campaign for Fort Wayne businesses and numerous civic projects.

If by some chance, one Tuesday after school you hear the sound of cannon fire coming from G-Hall, don't be alarmed. It's only Commander Marsh, leading his troops through another military war game. Marsh's troupes sit around a square, flat table setting another grueling game and preparing for fire.

By Wednesday, as the smoke clears, Commander Marsh changes into Mechanic Marsh and leads his troops, not through the battlefield, but into the shop to repair small engines.

Spirit week's purpose has been stated to be to kindle the spirit of Generals, be the catalyst for the team on Homecoming night. But who holds the spark, who can light the fuse?

Smoldering, spirit week started on the "shady" side, when creative Gens covered their optical organs with sunglasses, not because of the Monday Blahs or bloodshot eyes, but because they had that most elusive of qualities—spirit.

If you walked down the hall on Tuesday you'd have thought you were seeing double as the Generals dressed alike alike. Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman this wasn't but "Double Up Archers Day" which heightened the flaming spirit.

Wednesday, wrapped in rags, Generals learned the art of hoboing on "Trample Archers Day."

Spirit flamed that night at the "Tube Steak Bake" following the annual Senior-Junior Powderpuff Football Game where the Juniors beat the Seniors.

tradition of the Junior candy sale was carried out on Thursday along with "Flood the Archers Day." By the end of the day, umpteen interruptions, 2,000 tootsie pops and 6,000 tootsie rolls later, the Juniors had a profit of $138.

The arrival of the chocolate goodies was heralded by announcements such as "Chew, Chew, Chew Your Tootsies!" Even though the teachers weren't the most enthusiastic people about the interruptions, they welcomed the Juniors with opened mouths!

As the week came to a close we realized that each one of us holds the spark and can light the fuse spreading that most contagious of elusive qualities—spirit.

HOW FAR DID YOU GO?

Taking in a movie, going to a party or basketball game, cruising, or whatever you want to call it—A Date.

It all starts when you pick her up and, with your right arm around her, she is practically sitting on your lap as it is next to impossible to shift and steer with your other hand while trying to concentrate on the road and your destination. Whether a sporting event, a blockbuster movie, or perhaps the Prom, you both enjoy yourselves, and end up at your deserted house, you decide to stay for a minute. Minutes may turn into hours and one thing may lead to another . . . And inevitably you rush her home where your fulfilling date concludes with a passionate kiss. You then must rush back home where, of course your parents are waiting, wondering why you are so late.

oft, shimmering ice crystals—white as the hair of age—has caused an uproar between drivers and the road. Stuck cars, closed schools and hot chocolate are common language around the snowy winter season.

The winter of '77 will go down in history, as did the famous winters our parents continuously preach to us about. "You've got it easy, I had to walk three miles to school." Well, now we too have something to preach to our children. Here is our sermon:

It was a cold, brisk, Thursday afternoon. We were sitting in a chilly classroom when an icy voice came over the P.A. system announcing the perilous storm. From then on it was oblivion. Thermostats were drastically reduced from seventy-five degrees to a chilly sixty degrees. Fuel reserves were cut back greatly. As if that wasn't enough, we were completely snow-bound, remaining home, with little chance of escape. If you were one of the few that tried to fight the inevitable; sub-zero temperatures, snow-drifts and unplowed roads were determined to stop you.

Some, maybe the smart ones, just stayed home by the fireplace, waiting for oranges.

MONEY: BROTHER,

oney. Our civilization — the world has created a unique system of trade that has intrigued and allured man throughout history. That system has put price tags on our merchandise, our life styles, and, some claim, even our souls themselves. That which has struck a siren sound of change in our hungry pockets—money.

Why and what is money? What defines that desire to grasp just a handful of the greasy substance in one's sweaty palm? Greed is becoming a permanent institution in the psyche, nudging out baseball as America's most popular national sport. "God, guns, and greed made this country what it is. The American way, respect it, defend it, extend it."

And we have. Civilizations world wide, crave not necessarily for American knowledge, but for American wealth. Shiny, slippery, sleazy coins trickling through their fingers falling down to the earth from which they come.

From the time we could crawl on the same ground, we've been down groveling for those coins. Why? For food, movies, albums, dates, ("who says money can't buy love?") cars, gas, busses, ("money makes the world go around") pants, shirts, shoes, coats, "mad money" Bare necessities—booze, cigarettes, and even pot.

Teenagers make up only 20% of the population, yet buy over 60% of the record albums, over 40% of all cosmetics, 65% of all movie tickets, and 80% of all radio equipment. From the good little boy who receives a quarter for every A on his report card, to the girl who babysits for him, to the guy who wants to marry her, because she has money, we all love money.

Why? Money is power, money is beauty, money is glory, money is love—money is "the root of all evil". And jobs are the fertilizer fed to the roots, the roots of evil. Jobs is the exact word that the majority of Americans use to describe their jobs.

Relatively few students like their jobs. They sacrifice time, fun, sleep, homework, even sanity for the feeling of that crunchy, crisp, texture of cold cash, but, though students may dislike their jobs, they dislike not having a job even more. While the nation's unemployment is approximately 7%, youth unemployment is near 20%. The mad ridiculous fight to get a job is directly proportional to the frantic race to "keep up with the Jones's." This syndrome is powered by that lovely silver, gold, and green. Colors that in the American mind are synonymous with THE BEST.

Anything that costs more is better, no matter what its actual quality. What are the directions to become the best? Not surprisingly they've been dictated to us since we've been crawling on the floor,

Y DAY '77

For some it was the excitement of bustling Chicago, for others, the silence of the alarm clock as they sank into the haze of truancy. For most who participated, May Day meant excitement, challenge, a break from boredom, and even a little education. Still, the people who worked hard to organize May Day had a right to be disappointed. Only about two-thirds of the student body actually participated. Scott Marquardt spent many an hour organizing May Day. Working above and beyond the call of duty, Marquardt deserves our respect and admiration for his achievements. Was it worth it? Most students thought it was.

"Isn't it worth giving over half of the student body, the half that really works and cares, a day to do anything they want? The other half probably wouldn't learn anything anyway." Another student had a different opinion, "It was a joke."

One who seemed to enjoy it said, "It was fun! I hope they have it again next year!"

Some of the courses included a thirty-mile bike hike in which everyone finished, a trip to Ball State's Journalism Day and a trip to a local funeral home. May Day was a success in those person's eyes who participated. For those who did not . . . well . . . the wool was pulled a little farther over their eyes.

What is a Student Council? Is it a line of communication between students and faculty? An arouser of pep? Or is it the sometimes super-secret organization that disappears for an hour a month without really noticeable results.

Mayday, no talent show and the Christmas activities are several projects to be conducted by this pool of students.

Scott Marquardt put in many hours of preparation for the almost cancelled Mayday. Although abused by many students, Mayday was held anyway. Cindy Hays took most of the Homecoming responsibilities upon herself, without the help of many needed students. Dave Stouder became chairman of movies, and tried all the tricks of the trade to make them a success. Unfortunately they still went under. Jeff Dohner and Gretchen Schneider handled the Christmas activities. These included hall decorations and the bureau collection. These were the best received efforts by the council this year. Near the end of the year, Molly Hagan tried her hand at running a Talent Show which lacked preparation and teacher involvement and was consequently cancelled.

One of the most positive aspects of this year's council was the smoking proposal of the H-Hall restroom. The object of the proposal was to eliminate destruction and vandalism in the restroom.

This group of organized students were led by Matt Franke and Joe Andrew. Matt's strong hand on the gavel brought order to all the meetings.

HERE'S THE STORY:

Oh no! Not another sermon on alcohol, marijuana, and smoking. Come on, what could they say that we don't know already? We've heard the propaganda; At least the T.V. ads are more exciting. But wait—there are real issues here.

Suddenly you're standing in the midst of a demanding crowd totally isolated from the fun by your moral values and you're asking yourself, "What's so stupid about drinking anyway?" If you've found yourself caught up in the turmoil of such issues lately, more than likely you've had your fill of sermons on the "nots" and are still trying to find some support for the "why nots."

Well you're not going to get another sermon from us, BUT, before you get your hopes up too high (no pun intended), you'll find no encouragement either—just some straight facts to boggle the mind. The figures tell a story: Let's hope everyone lives happily ever after . . .

THE BASIC FACTS

The catalog poll encompassed four hundred students picked randomly one hundred from each class. Honesty and truthfulness were strongly impressed on all those polled.

CLASSES AND AREAS

At Wayne the senior class continues with the highest percentages of students who drink alcoholic beverages. 72% of the seniors have tried marijuana, again the highest percentage at Wayne. What is hard to believe is that, 36% of all sophomores smoke cigarettes, ranking as the class with the most regular smokers. The student residential area with the most drinkers and cigarette smokers is Waynedale, while more students in the Urban Area have tried marijuana than any other area.

MONEY

—the root of all evil tends to grow strong where pot, alcohol, and cigarettes are concerned. Roaches, empty bottles, and butts are "change back from your dollar," 30 of which go for an ounce of marijuana, three and a half for a carton of cigarettes or a fifth of cheap Burbon. The catalog's poll showed a direct correlation between the amount of money a student spent and the amount of alcohol and marijuana he used. The poll showed the converse, however, when cigarette smoking is concerned; those with lower incomes smoke more.

RELIGION

In the beginning God created man, then along came teen-agers. As time slowly passed the teen-agers of the '70's smoked pot, drank booze, and smoked cigarettes. Almost half of all Wayne students said their families show "some interest" in religion, of these people 79% drink, 63% have tried marijuana, and 28% smoke cigarettes.

In the era of "I found it" 22% of the people polled showed no, or very little, interest in religion. These students "found" something stronger as 83% of them drink, 64% have tried grass, and 41% smoke cigarettes regularly. What are thought of as the "evils of man-kind" are used by an amazing number of very religious people. A little over half of the avid church goers drink alcohol, 38% smoke pot, but only 15.5% smoke cigarettes. Of those showing "high interest" in religion, 70% drink, which is twenty percent more than those showing "very high interest." Smoking cigarettes and pot were close, with the high interest category 5% higher.

PARENTS

Is it a case of monkey see monkey do? Apparently so. Three fourths of Wayne High School students drink or have drunk alcohol, whether it be a can of beer at a friends wedding or 152-proof Jamaican Rum at a party. They drink; but, of this group, 78% of their parents drink.

One of the most surprising answers was that less than one third of all students smoke cigarettes, yet almost 100% considered the bathrooms disgusting, primarily because of all the cigarette butts and ashes littering the rooms. The "bad" example of the parents seemed not to influence their children. Of those polled 60% of their parents smoke while only 30% of the students admitted to smoking regularly.

Of all Wayne students whose parents drink 75% of these students also drink. If the parents don't drink then only 25% of the students drink. So if a parent doesn't drink their son or daughter is not likely to down that can of "Schlitz"

(Rt.) Why is consuming great quantities of a cold and bitter liquid considered to be "grabbing all the gusto you can?"

(Blw.) Smoking in the restroom is a very popular past-time as a general "relaxes" and smokes a cigarette between classes.

PROBLEMS

The most common problem concerning the drinking of alcoholic beverages and the smoking of pot and cigarettes by an overwhelming majority was parent's disapproval. "It's bad for the health" was next on the list of "harmful" habits. The problem of cost was third as it seems students' habits cost more than they could afford. "People think you are square" was also a problem many people feared.

SMOKING LOUNGE

We know that we have very little say about Wayne putting in a smoking lounge, but for the record here is what the students think:

School wide: 97.5% of all smokers want the smoking lounge with 12.5% not wanting one. Of all non-smokers, 71.9% want the smoking lounge and 28.1% don't want one. It is interesting to note that the students think that 75% of all teachers smoke regularly in their lounge.

CONCLUSION

That's the Catalog's story, like it or not it's the truth. But what has it proven? Are we dark alley gangsters if we party, or non-conformist squares if we don't? Essentially nothing could be proven. But much was shown. Plainly, simply, without slant. Here it ends; here we are—young, confident but not necessarily content with what we are. This is our story today. But tomorrow comes, you turn the page, changing and flowing, like water colors in the rain.

THE FACTS

14% of the students polled have experimented with "harder" drugs.
2.6% of the students polled have been arrested for possession, use, or sale of marijuana.
97.5% of cigarette smokers want a smoking lounge.
The most common problem students face with drinking or smoking is parents disapproval.

NOW SHOWING APATHY

Blah, Blah, Blah.

"Hello."

"Hey are you going to the club meeting tomorrow?"

"Heck no, it's boring. No one ever goes anyway!"

"Did you hear about the talent show?"

"No I never listen to the announcements, blah, blah, blah."

"Well there isn't going to be one. No one wanted to take charge. All the teachers talk about how us students don't ever do anything, and look what they do when they get their chance."

"All they ever do is give tests and homework. Blah, Blah."

"I never do homework. I gave it up for Lent two years ago. I don't care if I pass or fail, Neither do the teachers. It won't change my life. My grades don't mean a thing as long as I graduate. As long as I have my job I don't mind, blah."

"Me neither. Oh yeah, that reminds me, I have a history test tomorrow, but I left my books and notes at school, anyway I skipped sixth period so I didn't have time to go back to school, pity shame, blah, blah."

"It just doesn't pay to care anymore, blah, blah, blah."

Apathy is "point the finger at someone else because it's never your fault." If the number of people who usually sit around complaining about homework, teachers and continually repeat things such as, "Teachers don't care, Students don't care, and I don't care," are more apathetic than they care to admit.

(Abv. Rt.) Remember all the people who walked this hall? Remember all the people who went to club meetings? Remember all the people who yelled at pep sessions? Remember all the people who were in the Talent Show? Remember?

The Talent Show promised to be the best production of the year. Too bad we didn't have one.

Why is it that a school's students are measured by the amount of pep they do or do not have? Is it essential for a school to have a good basketball, football, or baseball team to have pep?

Pep is a "must have" thing at most schools. Wayne High School is no exception. We have our cheerleaders, pompons, twirlers, and band to rouse spirit, but they cannot create it from nothing. It has to be there waiting to be found.

"Hey, what are you staring at?"

"Nothing, I was just thinking of all the fun times we had at pep sessions and games."

"Yeah. Hey, remember the Homecoming pep session when Mr. Seele got suckered into being the South Side Sucker?"

"Or the regional pep session when most of the faculty was in that skit?"

"Then there were the regional games at the Coliseum. They were exciting."

Especially those last few games. Boy, I sure wish all the games were as exciting as those."

"I guess it really has been a good year. Pep is really a good thing to have at school. It sort of breaks the monotony of the 'everyday same old blah' stuff."

It has been a very fruitful year for Wayne sports. The Generals' well rounded attack in many different sports gave them a good shot at both the boys' and girls' All-City sports trophies.

The basketball squad thrilled the majority of General sports enthusiasts. Wayne fans rejoiced and cried as the cagers were ranked second in the state, lost to Concordia in the SAC Holiday Tourney, won the Summit Athletic Conference title, missed the number one rating with a loss to Blackford, won the sectional, and finally lost in the regional to South Side.

However, it would be difficult to say that the cagers were Wayne's best in '76-'77. The twelfth rated cross country squad set the boys' mark for the school's best win-loss record at 27-3 (.900). A disciplined volleyball group won their sectional title and posted a 21-3 regular season mark (.875). The roundball year was 17-2 (.895).

Because of this and similar success in other sports, it would be virtually impossible to fairly rank Wayne athletics from best to worst. Therefore, in order not to discriminate, the Sentry '77 is presenting each sport in the traditional alphabetical order.

Catcher Mike Reed comes across the plate with one of Wayne's three runs against South Adams. All-SAC second team shortstop Mark Holloway stations himself into position before the pitch.

The preseason polls ranked Wayne twentieth, better than any other SAC nine, but the promising year started more slowly than expected when the Generals dropped five of their first nine SAC contests.

A promising season became a "Thomas"ing season when Jerry Thomas pitched and hit the Generals to crowns in the New Haven Tournament and the New Haven Sectional. Thomas' 1.68 earned run average and record setting five triples helped win seven of Wayne's last ten regular season games. One of those victories was a 7-0 uproar against second ranked Blackford.

Aiding .300 hitters Kent Doehrman, catcher Mike Reed, and shortstop Mark Holloway, the brother duos played significant roles. John and Jim Tourney were valuable cogs in the pitching rotation along with Mark Wright, who also played second base. Mark's brother, Kevin, played third and hit .303. Rose and Donnie Barnes took two of the outfield positions until Roosevelt quit in order to play All-Star basketball.

Finding the lane open, Gary Bush frequently converted the lay-up around Elmhurst contenders.

The General basketball team of '76-'77 made narrow victories a regular occurrence, and the expected thrashings a rarity. It was a team that, at times, showed signs of immortality, while it also was a team that at times couldn't last 45 seconds on the Gong Show. Nevertheless, they won a second straight sectional.

The Generals, receiving first place votes in the UPI balloting, and climbing as high as second in the state on the AP scale, were led by an awesome front line touted as the toughest in the state. Roosevelt Barnes Wayne's All-SAC forward and All-State guard and soon to be a "Maker of Boilers" for Freddy Schauss of Purdue, led the team in scoring with 448 points. Barnes' counterpart, "Big Al" Gooden, possibly the most underrated player in the state, set a team record for setting the most records. Along with leading the team on the boards with 282 grabs, Gooden was the "Iron Man" of the Generals with a total of 714 minutes of hardboard action. Al will continue his career by offering his talents to promising Ball State.

Faking his Dwenger defender, Al Gooden improves his shooting position which helped him become Wayne's leading sectional scorer.

Gary Bush found the Memorial Coliseum floor compatible with his ball handling as the baffled Dwenger Saints discovered.

The middle man of the Wayne squad, 6'10" Steve Bates will be traveling to Arkansas to further his own roundball education, but not before he aided the team with 334 markers, and 203 rebounds. Not a record, but still a necessity in Wayne's success.

The Wayne backcourt was ably manned by a trio of players. The foremost being the main spark during sectional action, Gary Bush. Bush unfortunately was hampered throughout the season with a bad knee, curtailing his scoring stats on the season. Jon Sieber began the year opposite Gary at guard, but suffered a hand injury during pre-game warm-ups prior to the Snider contest, capping his starting time for the season. Then, coming off the reserve squad, a junior proved that he could fight and scrap with the varsity as well. Brian Simmons filled the roll remarkably by hitting 71% from the free throw line and is bright spot for future Wayne campaigns.

Then there was the "Ohio Player" who only started as a rumor during teacher's convention among the players and fans. A transfer from Fairmont High School in Ohio, junior Dain Price didn't play the sax, but proved he could hum the nets for the team's best floor percentage of 61%. Price unfortunately rode the bench throughout the year, but, due to his anonymity to a tough Bellmont squad, was able to burn their defense for a controversial on-the-road victory over the host Braves.

There were two other seniors that aided the team throughout the year, the duo being Doug Fogwell and Kurt Schneider. Fogwell, who's ballhandling could gain him more recognition on other teams played back-up the Wayne's starting guards. And there was the pinpoint passing of Schneider, who set his scoring records in pre-game action.

Other juniors to see playing time throughout the year were Mark Cammack, Jay Springer, and Donnie Barnes while Mark Bush came off the reserve season to see sectional action.

AN EIGHT CYLINDER UNDERCLASS

Coach Lee DeTurk's 14-6 reserves presented the school with six outstanding players. Because of his superior ball handling and shooting abilities, Donnie Barnes led the second team to a Reserve Holiday Tournament championship and soon after that found a spot on the varsity. Mark Cammack retrieved more than 100 rebounds and had worthy assistance from Rick Spencer, who dominated the other side of the boards.

At the guard positions, Mark Bush was the playmaker who rarely missed a lay-up all year and Chuck Underwood was the shooting guard that led Wayne's high powered attack. In Donnie Barnes' absence, Kent Doehrman took over a forward spot becoming a clutch player when he iced a victory over Belmont with two pressure free throws.

Chuck's brother, Ronnie Underwood, maneuvered the sophomore squad from the guard location and broke into the reserves after the C team schedule had been completed. The sophs would not have finished at an even 5-5 without their massive center, Jim Tourney. Tourney was also used widely in the reserve line-up as a shot blocker and rebounder.

The freshmen also had their superstar. A quick Vaughn Starks led the inexperienced 3-7 team in both scoring and rebounding. "He's real dedicated," commented Roosevelt Barnes, Jr.

As the summation of freshman basketball aptitude, 5'11" Vaughn Starks shoots the lights out of a defense.

Junior Kent Doebrman, playing at forward throughout the second half of the season, drives around a Redskin antagonist.

Mark Bush proved to be no "Bush Leaguer", as he outhustles contenders and is the continual spark for the Generals.

Leading rebounder junior center Mark Cammack proves his offensive ability by making light of a Norwell Knight.

Soon to be varsity guard Donnie Barnes helps pace Wayne's overtime victory over crosstown rival North Side.

Rick Spencer, forward member of the reserve squad, sinks two on a breakaway lay-up against Northrop opposition.

Chuck Underwood, a high scoring guard, combines ball handling and body control to pace reserve play.

Sophomore Jim Tourney eyes the net for two, displaying the form that earned him the right to move up the reserves.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

A seasoned Heritage squad disappointed Wayne's girls basketball team in double overtime for the sectional championship, 63-60. But Wayne should be back in that championship game again next year for the obvious reason that the Generals' top three players are coming back next year.

Wayne was the only Summit Athletic Conference team to have two players who averaged double figures in scoring. Center Linda Stadler, a junior, gained ALL-SAC honors for the second consecutive season and led the conference in scoring. She was also distinguished as the first-ever female player-of-the-week in the News-Sentinel's "Hardwood Honors" column.

Wayne's other scorer, Rosalyn Walters, was their backcourt sharpshooter. Rosalyn, also a junior, was considered one of the quickest players in the league.

The third most valuable player turned out to be sophomore Beth Doehrman. Beth and Linda's overpowering height ruled the rebounding and set blocks so that Rosalyn could shoot over the defense unguarded, while seniors Cheryl Jones, at forward, and Joan Ward, at guard, were used to work the ball to this talented trio while they were undefended.

The girls reserve squad saw limited action due to a small slate of games and the remarkable endurance of the starting five. However, they did come to the rescue when the varsity workhorses were in foul trouble.

A variety of talent led the freshman quest for the city title. Team captain Joanie Zimmerman directed the General flow of traffic on the court as Wayne downed Northwood and Shawnee in the tournament before bowing out to Franklin.

In that tourney, Jan Tourney was outstanding. She did it all—ball handling, shooting, and rebounding. Five-foot eleven-inch Kelly Encoff also possessed an innate skill for scoring and rebounding. This freshman team should enhance the already attractive varsity quintet of 1977-78.

Karen Curry tosses up an opportune shot and Lisa Helms looks for rebounding position in reserve action.

Bellmont defenders try frantically to stop Linda Stadler, but Linda is at her best while under the basket.

Scoring is merely one of Jan Tourney's many basketball abilities that she exhibits during the freshman tournament.

To set up their strategy against Franklin, Jan Tourney (left), Kelly Encoff, and Coach Davis meet during a time-out.

This time we ALMOST made it to the top—didn't we boys.

As Wayne's greatest cross country season came to an end, the overwhelming spirit, generated throughout the season, ended in anguish as an unfortunate ankle injury caused Wayne to hand over the SAC title to rival Northrop.

Hopes of placing in sectionals, so top runner Mike Scott could return in time for Regionals, were disappointed as Wayne placed fifth. Only the top four teams advanced.

Coach Detwiler, pushing his harriers all season, found the team at its peak come tournament time. It was unfortunate that number one runner Mike Scott, was inactive due to an ankle injury which he suffered in the final SAC meet just prior to the opening of sectionals.

"You can lose one man . . ." stated Coach Nelson Detwiler, hoping to pull out one of the top four sectional positions, ". . . but you can't lose two." This the Gens found to be true as another frontrunner, Jim Wilson, gave a super performance while recovering from a dental operation.

Injuries were Wayne's nemesis in crosscountry, as well as in football, making it unfortunate that Wayne's best season came to a seemingly anticlimatic end.

Generals harriers stand tensed waiting for the gunshot to signal the start of their sectional run. Coach Nelson Detwiler strikes a proud pose and rightfully so as he possesses one of the strongest SAC squads.

In an attempt to guard against leg cramps Wayne harrier limbers up before his two and one half mile run.

THE ALMOST SEASON

Potential was tremendous...

as competition among front runners Mike Scott, Mark Wilson, Mike Hunkler, and Jim Wilson proved invaluable in earning the team its highest rating of the season, twelfth in state!

The team broke records on every grade level with Senior Jim Wilson running the course in 12:22, one of the best times in the state. With a remarkable time of 12:34, Mike Hunkler set a new Sophomore standard, and Kenton Bailey set the top Freshman time by finishing the two and one half mile course in 12:51.

The varsity finished the SAC season second, behind Northrop, with a 27-3 overall record topping the previous Wayne best of 16-9, and Junior Mike Scott voted to the all SAC team. Meanwhile, the junior varsity finished strongly, tied for first in SAC with an overall record of 26-4.

(CW. from upper RT.) Runners stand at attention listening for the gunshot to begin the vital sectional showdown.

Number one runner, Mike Scott, rounds the first leg of the race as the lone runner.

It's evident that early in the race Wayne's toughest competition lies within the team itself as they battle for the lead.

Frosh 3rd in city

(C.C. from Top) Tension mounts as player anxiously await the snap of the ball to start play in the city runnerup game.

The superior skill of Wayne's reserve squad is demonstrated by the form of quarterback Bo Bieto.

During the Freshman championship game the ball sails just out of reach, as did the city title. In the final game of the frosh season it seems that Wayne clashed with Lane, literally.

The problems of the varsity were visited upon the play of the reserve, as a chain reaction was caused by the injuries of the varsity players.

Key reserve players were plucked from their team to fill empty varsity positions, thus forcing the reserve coaches to rebuild their team. Bob Bieto was installed in the varsity backfield as a result of injuries to Gary Bush and Amos Belcher. Neil Schoenle, quarterback for the reserves, was also placed in the starting varsity backfield and the absence of these two left a huge hole in the reserve team backfield.

At the beginning of the season the offense was listless and didn't score in either of its first two games, though Wayne only lost the second game by a 2-0 score. Middle guard Pat Parsons, along with linebackers Marshall Springer and Kevin Wallbridge were stalwarts for the defense. Both offense and defense combined to have a solid game defeating Homestead, 12-0. After two consecutive scoreless losses the reserve, as with the varsity, made Harding the victim of a final game explosion, winning 38-0 and finishing the season with a 2-4 record.

In stark contrast to the varsity and reserve, the freshman squad enjoyed immense success and, unusual for ninth graders, had a fine passing attack in addition to their running game.

Wayne defeated Fairfield and Kekionga in its first two games, but in the third game were tripped up by eventual city runners-up Geyer, 22-6. The loss was even more painful since Wayne had defeated Geyer earlier in the Freshman Jamboree, where many teams play a series of mini-games.

Unfortunately, with a short schedule one loss can hurt, and, though Wayne won its last two games to finish at 4-1, they still finished second in the South division to Geyer. Wayne then played North division runnerup Lane and defeated them 6-0 to give them a third place finish in the entire city.

Dazed confusion was the reaction of the varsity football team, as well as the fans, as name after name was added to the injured list, including five major players who were sacrificed early in the season.

The line suffered when, two weeks prior to the start of the season, Brad Springer broke a bone in his right foot. Clyde Peterson joined the injured list when he was hampered by a knee injury suffered during the jamboree, followed by the fall of two Senior backfield men, Gary Bush and Roosevelt Barnes.

Although it seemed that the Generals had started on the wrong foot, or at least on an injured foot, they had momentum in the first half of their opening season game against Snider. However, with the start of the second half came a turn of events that brought (CC from upper RT) Varsity cheerleader Beth Stadler and reserve Laura Steinforth lead the crowd in a rousing cheer.

Head Coach Carl Mosser leans over senior Rosie Barnes after he fell to the ground with an injury that put him out for the season.

The powerful General defense brutally attacks the Elmhurst Trojans as they attempt to gain yardage.

During the 1976 football season injuries dominated the scene as Gary Bush joins the ranks of the walking wounded.

With the dominance of injuries in '76 one might wonder if Assistant Coach Steve Keefer is instructing Generals to fall down before they get hurt.

Wayne its first defeat and perhaps set the trend for the remainder of the season. Wayne won its next battle against Heritage with a 13-0 shut-out and proceeded to fall victim to the remainder of their competitors until they devastated Harding, 42-7.

Wayne's tragic season, proved to be a surprise to everyone, including Fort Wayne sportswriters who in their preseason predictions had named Wayne the dark horse candidate for the Summit Athletic Conference Championship.

The injuries that caused the poor season are simply a part of sports that is beyond anyones control; still, with so much potential and experience, Generals can't help wonder what the outcome might have been had fate been on their side.

(Middle) Senior Kurt Schneider, an excellent placement hitter and putter, strokes his tee shot onto the fairway.

Gregg Olmstead frequently took the low medalist honors when Kurt Schneider didn't.

Rapidly improving sophomore Tom Smith won the number five player spot at the latter part of the season.

Senior Dan Hirschy was one of Wayne's long ball hitters and held the number four varsity position.

A good irons game scored numerous birdies for junior Jim Bleeke at Brookwood Golf Course.

Kirk Morey displays his fine sense of concentration as he prepares to tee-off on Brookwood's fifteenth hole.

GOLFERS PUTT THE PIECES TOGETHER

Golf is a highly individual sport in which consistency is rare. Each of Wayne's golfers frequently shot well, but not always during the same match.

Although Wayne's All-SAC linksmen Kurt Schneider and Gregg Olmstead carded 39.7 and 39.9 averages respectively, the team was not winning unless Kirk Morey, Jim Bleeke, Dan Hirschy, or Tom Smith came through with a low 40's score. This was most evident in the sectional when Olmstead tied for third lowest medalist with a 74. No other General was able to break 80 and Wayne finished seventh with a disappointing 324. Had the team shot a mere two strokes better, they would have captured a respectable fourth place.

In SAC play, Wayne grabbed fourth position with clutch victories over Snider and a split with powerful Northrop. The golfers also pulled together to tackle highly regarded New Haven, 160-162, and blast a strong Belmont team, 161-169.

COURAGE IS GRACE UNDER PRESSURE

Against Harding, Bernice Pepler scored a 7.45 floor exercise, then earned 6.45 points in the sectional floor exercise.

Juniors Alicia Dennis and Denise Bush lead Wayne's gymnastics team proudly into the gym for the start of a meet.

In vaulting, intermediate Sue Mileff never placed better than second until she won the regional vault with a 7.1 effort.

Senior Beth Stadler put in eight balance beam performances of seven or more points, including a regional winner of 8.15.

Ernest Hemingway defined courage as grace under pressure. Nowhere was this more evident than at the 1977 Gymnastics sectionals at Belmont High School. Beth Stadler, one of the most supremely gifted athletes in Wayne's history, performed with her usual grace, garnering firsts in all categories except vaulting enroute to being named the top all-around gymnast. Junior Denise Bush performed artfully, gaining seconds in vaulting and floor exercise and a fine fourth in the over-all rankings. But the real pressure was on Bernice Pepler in the floor exercise. Bernice fell, injuring herself, and could have dropped out of the competition, but instead summoned forth all of her courage and finished a then painful routine. Wayne won by .05 points, a slim margin of courage.

Wayne's optional team capped their season at the regionals, again led by the talents of Beth Stadler. Beth won the balance beam and came in third in floor exercise, placing fifth over-all. She advanced to state in both the balance beam and floor exercise.

A promising balance beam performer, sophomore Ruanne Berger begins her routine by mounting the beam side-saddle.

Senior Lori Wilson proved to be a versatile gymnast, placing fourth in the sectional beginning all-around category.

Experienced senior Rhonda Fleck usually accomplished a first or second on the uneven parallel bars.

Poised on the balance beam, intermediate Lee Goldner aimed a 7.15 point performance at the Huntington North Vikings.

Beginner Carolyn Lockett rattled off a string of five first place floor exercises before and after a defeat at Huntington.

Vaulter Kay Nunn sprang to the number one spot against Eastside in the beginning level.

In addition to a talented and experienced optional level team, new coach Karen Harris was also greeted by fine sectional and regional performances by the beginning and intermediate level teams, capped by Sue Mileff's trip to state and Sue Block's second place finish in the sectional all-around competition.

At the sectionals, less than one point separated Sue Block from a first place ranking in the all-around competition. After winning the intermediate floor exercise, Sue placed a consistent fourth in the remaining events. Cheryl Trainer added a second in the floor exercise and a third in the uneven parallel bars, also on the intermediate level. After placing second in the sectional intermediate vault, Sue Mileff qualified for state with a regional victory in that same event.

Carolyn Lockett placed first at sectionals in the floor exercise at the beginning level. Kathy O'Brien was second on the beginning level uneven bars.

We dance
to a whispered voice, overheard by the soul
undertaken by the heart,
and you may know it,
if you may know it.

At sometime or another each individual is possessed by the spirit of freedom. And just as freedom is something different to each individual, so too is the manner in which he chooses to express that freedom.

Whether your true self is expressed and fulfilled by gliding uninhibited across the ice, snow or water, all of us feel the need to be "all by ourself".

So to all the unsung heroes and heroines who spend countless hours "dancing to that voice overheard by the soul and undertaken by the heart," the next four pages are dedicated to you, so we may know YOU, if we may know you.

THE PUCK STOPS HERE

After years of acceptance at other northern Indiana high schools, hockey made its debut at Wayne High School. Because hockey is not an Indiana High School Athletic Association sanctioned sport, it is not supported by the school athletic fund, so when the players needed money for ice rental, they combined their team with South Side and were sponsored by Pizza Hut.

The season was highlighted with a tie and a victory over the highly regarded North Side Redskin "Redbuds" as Wayne players acted out important roles. One such star, Scott Dettmer, was one of the top three goaltenders in the area.

Dettmer's successful defense was aided by many playmaker defensemen. In hockey, creating fast breaks or breaking them off often requires breaking someone's vertebrae. Wayne's force-fed checking generally came from the powerful duo of Greg Dalman and Kevin Teeters. Cracks like that set up plays for the sharpshooters, and the .enacious Jim Ryan kept the puck in play on the opponent's end of the ice, where Mark Holloway's quickness could feed the biscuit through the goal.

STARS

Intramural sports appealed to a large variety of players over the '76-'77 school year. One very popular event was the open recreation night, when anyone with a Wayne ID could borrow equipment and play basketball, racquetball, badminton, table tennis, paddleball, or weightlifting.

Another attraction was the team basketball competition. James Austion was the MVP as he guided his team, the Black Six, to the title over Boss Skaggs, The Sting, and Dreamers which finished in that order. The Black Six also included three All-Star selections in John Soil, Donald Hall, and Melvin Smith. Jim Lebamoff of The Sting gained the Mental Attitude Award.

In intramural volleyball, Jeff Dohner was the Most Valuable Player as Brad Lahmann's team defeated Doug Fogwell's team for the championship. Dave McElhiney won the table tennis title for the second straight year by

ITS "ALL FAIR IN LUV" UNTIL TOURNEY TIME

Senior, Jon Sieber, demonstrates his finesse as he leaps into the air to return his opponents lob.
Tension dissolves in a congratulating handshake for Swedish exchange student Gunnar Troeddsen and opponent.

Three year veteran of the #1 singles spot, Jon Sieber, prepares to deliver a blistering serve to an opponent. Senior Jim Shirley squints against the glare of the sun as he winds up to return his opponents serve. Sophomore rookie, Jim Underwood, reaches far and wide on a tremendous defensive return.

It's easy for a good high school tennis player to get lost in the crowd, especially if he does not attend a large school. Jon Sieber, one of the toughest net men in the state, could not advance beyond sectionals as an individual's fate is determined by the performance of his entire team. This is not so in girls tennis or in boys' crosscountry where not only the best teams but also the best individuals have a chance to advance to state. The irony is that tennis is an individual sport.

The combined one-two punch of #1 singles players, Sieber, and #2 player, Swedish exchange student Gunnar Troedsson, led the team throughout the entire season. Sieber finished with a phenomenal record of 18-1 while Gunnar was 16-3. Both had high hopes going into sectionals where they dominated Westview in the first round 5-0. In the second round against Huntington, Sieber and Troedsson finished easily and then sat down hoping for Wayne to win one more match. It never happened; Wayne was out! Sieber and Troedsson could only wonder how many more matches they could have won.

Though the first doubles team of Bruce Ojeda and Brad Lahmann displayed fine team work, as did Jim Underwood and Jerry Stover, staging many exciting performances, the season was a mild disappointment to Coach Havens and the team.

The Wayne girl's tennis team finished second in sectionals with the best number one and number two singles players in the area. Wayne entered sectionals with a 7-4 record, Kathy O'Brien and Linda Stadler having finished the season undefeated in the top two spots. Kathy defeated Linda for the sectional championship crown, 6-4 and 7-6.

O'Brien entered sectionals having won all her matches in straight sets, in fact, her opponents averaged little more than one game per set. After winning sectionals, Kathy turned in a third place finish in regionals.

All four of Wayne's shortcomings were against SAC opponents, leaving Wayne fifth with a mark of 5-4 in the SAC. Three of the losses were by a close 4-3 count.

Cheryl Jones was also a productive player with a record of 4-3 in the third singles position and teamed up with Sue Block for a doubles team that proved unbeatable in three confrontations. Double's teams that Sue was a part of won eight times in eleven tries.

THE LONG AND WINDING OVAL

Distance runners are a special breed, and the strain and determination that is necessary is shown here by Mike Hunkler, Kurt Finton, and Rick Spencer.

(below) At the height of his jump, Eric McCarroll strains forward hoping for another victory in the long jump.

Wayne was gifted with superstars Gary Bush and Mark Cammack who were able to place in the state meet, yet the Generals also had other exceptional oval runners.

In the distance events, sophomore Mike Hunkler ran a record 9:44.5 two mile. Wayne's mile relay squad of Vince Alexander, Tommie Bell, Kevin Nunn, and Cleotis Boyd or Virgil Wallace stayed with many of the best. Each member was capable of a sub-54 second 440.

The field events always gave Wayne a "jump" start. Bush bested his own Wayne High jump mark with a 6'8" sixth at the state finals. Gary also won the regional long jump with a 21'7¾" leap, but the Wayne record was set by Eric McCarroll this year at 22'3¾".

Cammack, only a junior, claimed the runner-up spot in the state finals' high hurdles race after having won the regional highs and both sectional hurdles competition. Added with dash men Flanders Carswell, Mike Hicks, and David Graham, the Generals owned a quick 880 yard relay team.

Larry Norwood easily clears 10'6" in the preliminaries of the sectional pole vault competition.

Vince Alexander and Cleotis Boyd run stride for stride toward the finish line twenty yards ahead of their closest competitor in the 440.

CINDER STARS SHINE

Coach Sue Jordan's '77 team lacked the depth necessary to win triple meets, yet the girls' many top-notch efforts caused them to be respected throughout the area. The stars were at their brightest in the comprehensive meets such as the SAC meet in which they placed fourth.

In the SAC 440 yard run, Wayne took first and second. Kelly Geren broke the previous record by two seconds with a torrid 60.5 as Theresa Bell followed. The medley relay team of Melinda Barfield, Kay Nunn, Denise Bush, and Kelly Geren shattered the Wayne record enroute to an SAC meet triumph at 1:56.7 in contrast to the previous 2:02.5 mark.

One member of the medley team, Kay Nunn, was also an accomplished Hurdler. In the SAC meet, Kay was second with a record tying time of 10.7, and she placed second in sectionals, third in regionals, and sixth in the state finals, having rewritten her own Wayne record at 10.5 at a meet earlier in the season.

IHSA FIGHTS RULING ON WRONG COURT

Hoping to repeat as regional champions, Wayne's volleyball team began practice in August. This year however, there was one difference in girl's volleyball—boys. Due to a court ruling boys were allowed to play on girl's teams since there is no boy's volleyball competition among the schools. Wayne had one male member on its team which, though a seemingly minor adjustment, was something the team had to get used to. They accepted Louis Ojeda readily, when they realized he was on the team because he wanted to play volleyball and not for publicity.

The team adjusted well, ignoring the static they received from some of the teams they played. They kept their eyes on one goal: another shot at a state championship. Leading the way were spiker Linda Stadler, server Sue Block, and Laura Rudny on defense. Sue Block and another senior, Leigh Ludden were the main setters.

With the return of many varsity players, coach Sue Jordan molded the unit into an overpowering team, one of the best in the area. After a somewhat shaky start of five wins and two losses, they reeled off a winning streak of ten matches, defeating such fine teams as Leo and Northrup. They finished the season 8 - 1 in the Summit Athletic Conference and a tremendous 22 - 3 overall.

The Sectional final was reached by easily defeating Harding and Homestead, and the championship match against Bishop Luers was a thriller. Wayne won the first game by a score of 14 - 12, but then found itself behind 12 - 1 in the second game. With one of the best comebacks of the year they rallied to capture the Sectional crown 17 - 15.

The season came to an end when Wayne was edged out in Regionals by Concordia in three games. The match was unfortunately marred by questionable officiating. Of some consolation is the fact that Concordia became runners-up in state, second to a three boy, three girl team.

Male player Louie Ojeda, one of the most controversial figures in SAC, blocks his opponents powerful hit.

Three year veteran Sue Block sets her teammate up for a spike during a crucial match against Northrup.

Junior Laura Rudny shouts "We won!" with a bit of relief as the Generals finish up their SAC season 8-1.

Far Right The General starting line-up "takes the plunge" as they dive onto the floor for the start of the game.

With Wayne being the only four year high school in the FWCS system, there are advantages and disadvantages for inter-scholastic sports.

Coach Karen Harris, was forced to decide whether to drill her team in the fundamentals of junior high volleyball, or hone their skills for high school level competition.

Deciding on the more advanced form, Coach Harris compiled a disappointing 2 win and 9 loss record, but was pleased with the progress the team made and felt confident they were ready for varsity competition. The 1976 season ended for the varsity on a "grave injustice", as they were knocked out of regionals by a questionably unbiased IHSAA ref.

As one team member put it, "It seems unfair that a ref could determine the outcome of such a vital match . . . If we lost, we wanted to go down fighting, not already beaten."

Huntington North's ninety-eight pounder split two meetings with Mark Wilson (on top) who only acquired three losses.

Smart, quick, and strong Louie Bunnell accumulated a 20-3 record in probably the toughest weight division—105 pounds.

Coming back after a leg injury in football, Mike Reed captained the Wayne wrestlers and won sectionals at 177 pounds.

Steve Wilson proved to be a clutch wrestler—he beat all of his SAC adversaries in those final heavyweight matches.

Behind team captains Mike Reed and Larry Norwood and the addition of Coach Bill Ragle, the General grapplers changed a 4-5 '75-'76 Summit Athletic Conference slate into a runner-up SAC position in 1976-77.

The emergence of Reed and Norwood, along with the established abilities of Mark, Jim and Steve Wilson, and Louie Bunnell, added the necessary teamwork needed to produce the turn-around year. Mike, a letterman as a sophomore and junior, missed crucial meets during those years due to injuries or illnesses. Larry, also talented in the tenth and eleventh grades, was restricted from the varsity simply because he happened to be in the weight classes that contained superstar competitors.

Wayne started the season flying high when they destroyed Blackford and Woodlan before losing a close count to twentieth ranked New Haven, 25-24. The Generals later toppled struggling Elmhurst and went into the Manchester Tournament extremely confident after having knocked off SAC leader Northrop.

Then, fifteenth ranked Huntington North helped to keep Wayne out of the state's top twenty. The Vikings were the only team between Wayne and the Manchester Tournament championship, and then further embarrassed the Generals by beating them in a dual meet at Wayne.

Wayne continued its losing streak against rated teams when it lost to number eleven and SAC champion Snider. Quickly rebounding from defeat, the brawlers locked up second place by mauling Concordia, Harding, North Side, and South Side. Bishop Luers does not have a wrestling team and the Bishop Dwenger match was tentatively cancelled once and then permanently, both times by snow.

The favored Generals were upset by Harding when the Hawks' Bill Derbyshire defeated top seeded and returning champ Jim Wilson at 119 pounds. Mark Wilson (98 pounds) and Louie Bunnell (105 pounds) came away with their second sectional titles in as many years. Mark and Louie both ended the season in the semi-state with 20-3 records, setting marks for each weight class. Heavyweight Steve Wilson won his second consecutive sectional crown and Mike Reed was victorious at 177 pounds after two years of denial.

The individual efforts of these wrestlers propelled the Wayne team to an admirable third place regional finish and made them victors at the prestigious Goshen Tournament.

Thanks to returning lettermen A SEASON TURN, TURN, TURNS AROUND

Experience Pays Off

(Left to right)
Bill Ragle coached the freshmen to third place in city despite holding only seven wrestlers out of 13 weight classes.

Enroute to the freshman city 132 pound title, Brad Manes remained undefeated when he subdued this Kekionga challenger.

Wrestling at reserve 132 or 138 pounds, sophomore Doug Hawk helped the number two team over the .500 mark.

After a successful reserve tenure Ray Konger joined the varsity squad in an injury substitution capacity.

Because of the complex strategy of moves in wrestling, experience usually determines the best wrestlers. This explains why Wayne's reserve and freshmen teams were successful.

The tough varsity practices taught endurance and moves to the young wrestlers. This, along with the wisdom of first year coach Bill Ragle, vaulted Wayne into third place in freshmen city wrestling.

Leading the way was undefeated David Wilson. Dave was the Generals' all-purpose wrestler. He was the top freshmen ninety-eight pounder, successful as a 105 pound reserve and even filled in the varsity 98 pound spot when his brother Mark was ill.

Alan Hallback and Brad Manes were also undefeated city champs capturing the 105 and 132 pounds crowns respectively.

The reserves also participated in a tournament: the reserve takedown tournament. A takedown involves throwing your opponent to the mat while gaining control. Both contestants begin in a standing position. Dave Wilson won the 105 class with twenty takedowns. Bob Levy was victorious in the 145 division against nine challengers. Steve Borkowski finished second at 98 pounds with 28 takedowns.

Sophomore star Ray Konger jumped to the varsity when heavyweights became sparse, as was the case on all three levels. Ray was one of the wisest wrestlers, having studied under Coach Ragle as a Miami ninth grader.

Concluding a highly successful tenure at Wayne High School, the Class of '77 added further laurels to its crown during their final year. Many individuals were standouts in this year's graduating class: in athletics, in fine arts, and in other school-related activities. Also the class had its share of students who worked untold hours and received little or no publicity for their efforts.

The first of four classes to graduate from Wayne with some students having spent six years in the building, the Class of '77 has weathered many tense situations and witnessed other broadening phenomena. It takes little to recall the infamous "Geyer Riots" of four years ago. Tension was high between black and white students but we all survived; the buildings and the students.

It was well over four years ago that together we learned of the beginnings of the Watergate Affair. Over the subsequent three years, we saw the scandal eventually come to a climax with the resignation of President Richard Nixon. The nation suffered and a heavy pall of uncertainty hung over the country in the intervening period of time. We saw the Constitutional crisis through, however, and are now a stronger country for the experience. The nation survived the scare, the nation and its citizens.

Technically, it was over five years ago when all U.S. involvement in Viet Nam ended. Realistically however, our involvement did not end until later. In the beginning, we believed we were fighting against the advancement of Communism and in the end we didn't know what we believed in. At the peak of the Viet Nam "War", the threat of the use of nuclear weapons was very real and very frightening and very possible. The world anguished over the situation and finally saw compromise and intelligence triumph over total destruction. The world survived; the world and its people.

And now Wayne High School sends its Class of '77 into this world. A collection of young adults full of expectations, responsibilities, and apprehensions. A collection of young adults who have witnessed and learned from the mistakes of others and a few of their own; a group of young adults who, with the help of millions like them, have the potential to change the shape of the world's future. The potential to make the world a far better place for all people. The potential is present and can only be realized if the Class of '77 is willing to work. If their high school career is any indication, Wayne's Class of '77 is well on its way to making a large contribution toward a better future.

Standout

A major part of high school has traditionally been athletic competition. The Class of '77 made substantial contributions toward the General's success during their three-year stay.

Athletes

Barnes matured into one of the best in the state. Not to be forgotten are Gary Bush, Doug Fogwell, Kurt Schneider, and Jon Sieber. Sieber will also be remembered for his performance on the tennis courts. Football veterans Gary Collins, Mike Reed, Barnes and Gooden led the team to their only winning season one year ago.

Female competitors added their talents to Wayne's triumphs as evidenced by contributions by Joan Ward, Sue Block, Beth Stadler and many others.

Participation in athletic events occasionally tends to over-shadow work in the area of fine arts. Musicians and artists fared well during the Class of '77's residency in the H-wing, however, and on some occasions gained almost as much notoriety as their athletic counterparts. Tenor Gerry Durkee gained a certain amount of publicity when as a junior, he sang the National Anthem at various events. Fellow seniors Kevin Geren, Linda Bushey, Karen Fritze, and Jay Farlow leave behind musical careers to be proud of.

things running smoothly and set a standard in lighting that will be difficult to follow.

In art, Becky Mattes exemplified what the high school artist should be. Also showing exceptional talent were Lora Johnson and Jeff Dohner.

A million

Although apparently apathetic on occasion, the Class of '77 will leave behind its own indelible mark on Wayne High School accompanied by an impressive list of achievements. What lies in the future is of the utmost importance and will be entirely up to each individual senior to determine for himself. Some things will undoubtedly be forgotten: an obscure algebraic formula, the capital of Afghanistan, and some special relationships may even dim as the years pass, but also undoubtedly, days will occur when one will recall high school memories as clearly as if they'd happened just yesterday.

Fortunately for us all, the memories will always linger, many of the friends remain the same, even though far apart. With everything taken into consideration, high school wasn't so bad after all.

Mind and spirit floating upward into the rarefied air of the unknown—making the unknown known by learning new facts and skills. The return trip, bringing it back to the world, is as necessary as it is exciting.

NUMBERS

Numbers. Life is full of them. Your parking sticker number, student number, phone number, address number, social security number, locker number, license plate number, room numbers, date, time, and place numbers.

The periods of the day are times and places. Times that we hated, enjoyed, and will always want to remember. Places that we looked forward to going to and then couldn't wait to leave.

As the year progressed we were continually living over and over the six numbers that mark our day. One, two, three, four, five, six. They symbolized many things to each of us, classes we liked, classes we did well in, and classes that made us fall asleep. They were associated with people, classmates, and teachers. One, two, three, four, five, six . . .

These six numbers create our form of time in our own encapsulated society. The world of school revolves around them, they tell us what to do, when to eat, when to study, when to sleep, when to walk, when to talk, and how to live. They are our lives. "What a piece of work is man! How noble in reason! How infinite in faculties!" Math, English, gym, science, foreign language, business. One, two, three, four, five, six . . .

The numbers of the day. Walk through a day and remember. We've built one just for that purpose. Since it's hard to find one day that fits 1500 different people, you may not find all the parts of your day, but they will all be represented later. All classes are basically the same; they have their moments equally interesting and exciting, boring, bland, and dull. The use of classes isn't always in taking them, but remembering them. Let us go then you and I . . .

ENGLISH & FOREIGN LANGUAGES

The grandure, and the glory that was Rome, relived again as Mrs. Mack's 3rd. period Latin Class celebrated the reaping of the harvest in "Roman Fest".

Foreign Language Teachers: Donald Merkler, Lowell Shearer, Rosalie Guillot, JoEtta Eubanks.

English Teachers: Robert Stookey, Rosalie Guillot, Lowell Coats, Allen Peters, William Madden (Department Chairman), Carol Stone, David Didier, Jacqueline French, JoEtta Eubanks, Marita Baker.

LANGUAGE TEACHERS: Don Merkler, Rosalie Guillot, Lowell Shearer, JoEtta Eubanks (not pictured, Nancy Mack)

The team did real good the other night didn't it, Mr. Madden?"
"Yes, the team did WELL; it is a GOOD team."

Such exchanges would seem to indicate either that to some students English itself is a foreign language or, the more popular student view, that English teachers are too picky.

Giving students a choice between sports literature, mystery fiction, mythology, and journalism are attempts to make the often bitter, but always necessary, pill of composition a little easier to take. The pill is often bitter because it is hard work, but always necessary because after high school words both spoken and written will count—at home and out in the real world.

Foreign language classes are a unique blend of academic elements and entertaining activities. Those who are privileged to experience one of Herr Shearer's classes know that singing and polkaing compliment the tests and vocabulary drills. French is also a songful experience as rumor has it that Miss Guillot supplements the infamous 'Jean Claude' slides with a daily French chant. With a hat dance in their hearts, the students of JoEtta Eubanks and Don Merkler often 'taco' themselves to oblivion in the Wayne living center or at Don Pedros.

Latin is supposed to be a dead language, but is alive and well and living at Wayne. Magistra Mack togas her subjects in Roman dress, and catapults them to fame in the annual catapult contest each spring.

GYM

Wayne High School builds strong bodies six ways.

Wayne's six Physical Education teachers fight the good fight against bulging waist-lines, slack muscles, and cholesterol clogged blood vessels. Team sports and body building supplement the traditional GYM class in an attempt to promote the Greek ideal of the combination of a strong body and a strong mind. An English philosopher reminds us that the average boxer would be more at home in Ancient Greece than would the average teacher of Greek literature.

Not very often do students gather 'round in gym waiting impatiently to run laps, or do push ups but gymnastics is another story. Lines quickly gather around apparatus as students fly up over the trampoline, show their strength as Eugene Carter does when he muscles himself up on the rings, or as in the sport of paddleball which Lori Hicho "almost" demonstrates correctly.

HOME EC. & BUSINESS

Working diligently learning the "ABC's" of typing, Mr. Duane Rowe's fourth period typing class "Plunks" on ahead.

Business teachers: Jack Baker, Sue Jordan, Vicki Weaver, James Schroeder, Duane Rowe.

Home Ec. Teachers: Barbara Gould, Jan Mc. Danell, Joan Pauwels, Helen Bunnell.

Take a letter . . . take some notes . . . take this call on line three . . . take these figures into the third column . . . take my shirts to the cleaners . . . take my wife! No! Home economics is business, not just something to do in between soap operas. Homes are managed not just kept, and Wayne is the place to begin learning how. Learning how to choose the proper type of housing and how to prepare a meal are things worth knowing for both men and women.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch it's business as usual. Shorthand must be taken, letters typed, and books balanced. Businessmen must know the law as well as how to hire and fire workers. All such skills are taught at Wayne, and some are taught on the job through the D.E. and C.O.E. programs at Wayne.

Who is buried in Grant's tomb and what does he do for money? If he should still be alive is his desire to get out of the tomb a reflex or an instinct, and if he could be anyone else in World History who would he be? The answers to these and other questions are available for the asking in the B Hall, and in the government in exile around the corner in C Hall.

Social Studies is not a class in throwing parties unless you are planning a political party. The subject does cover a wide area from the WHAT HAPPENED of history to the WHY DID IT HAPPEN of Sociology, the HOW MUCH did it cost of economics, and the amendment of the constitution that justified ITS HAPPENING in the first place.

Mr. Brett Lucas makes a point on our "Manifest Destiny" as students listen closely, worrying about their own destinies on the upcoming test.

 &= \lim_{h \rightarrow 0} \frac{3x^2 + 6xh + 3h^2 - 2 - 3x^2 + 2}{h} \\
 &= \lim_{h \rightarrow 0} \frac{6xh + 3h^2}{h} \\
 &= \lim_{h \rightarrow 0} 6x + 3h \\

MATH

Mathematics is comforting, it gives reassurance that is obtained no other way. Snuggly in bed at night, isn't it nice to know that given  $d=v^2$ ;  $t+\frac{1}{2}at^2$  (the equation of a falling body), and with a mass of 81 quintillion tons and a speed of 2,300 mph it is impossible for the moon to fall on you during the night. If your dreams become troubled, it isn't from worrying that Y doesn't equal  $mx + b$  or that parallel lines might cross. Is it possible that one could be so jaded so as not to marvel at the wonders of the universe as recounted to us by Mathematics?

The set of all Mathematics teachers, M, such that M = (William Carey, James Chandler, Marvin Frey, Judy Davis, Robert Fox, Don Shaidnagle, Phillip Smith, Will Doehrman) and the set of all department Chairmen, F, such that F is a subset of M and F = (Mr. Frey.)

Complicated functions fill the board and are unscrambled before students very eyes by Mr. Marvin Frey.

Headlines scream the fall of our 'educational standards'. "Why Jane can't write", "Why Johnny can't read" are a few. Teacher's associations and colleges are crying in despair over the lower SAT, IQ, and AAT scores, while the solutions seem just beyond the horizon.

Problems seem to begin when the 3R's of mass elementary education can't teach each student to sit with 29 others, six hours a day, five days a week, nine months a year and succeed. In the words of Mrs. Mack, a teacher in the Opportunity Room, "... a student can't stay in elementary school when he's 14 or 15, he can't leave school and he becomes disturbing to his classes and to himself. Holding a 15 year old in 5th or 6th grade becomes psychologically and socially scarring, so school systems pass him on. That system produces some without basic reading skills who get into high school."

Once in high school the object of Alternative Education is continuing education at a pace by which each student can profit. Wayne, like all FWCS schools has several programs to help students having literacy problems, having trouble coping with the pace of classes, or having personality conflicts with teachers.

Various programs are available, designed to be flexible to the differing

"The first few weeks of school I have no students. I shut the door, close my eyes, and hope there won't be any kids who need me."

needs of the students as much as possible. The non-credit alternative is the Latinos program. Students are tutored individually during study hall while attending regular credit courses. As a scheduled class Work Study is offered as a grade/credit class which carries on courses at pace acceptable to its students. Also, in that vein, the Opportunity Room is available for students who find it difficult to keep with the pace of classes, or have problems with teachers or themselves. Students work at their own pace for credit, but unlike Work-Study are scheduled by referrals only. As explained by Mrs. Mack, the difference is that "... I take only referrals. The first few weeks of school I have no students, I shut the door, turn off the lights, close my eyes, and hope there won't be any kids who need me."

Because of numbers, education tends to be rigid, mass produced, and inflexible; people aren't. We are all searching, walking at many staccatoed paces; fortunately there are nooks along the winding path for the 'educational refugees' in our world.

Ranging from Advanced Comp. to Primary Reading, students pursue studies aided by Mrs. Mack. In the Opportunity Room, education is a path to be strolled at one's leisure, rather than being pushed along.

LIMBO

Caught in between neglect and oblivion

Limbo /lim-bo/ (L. abl. of limbus; edge, border) 1. an abode of souls barred from heaven thru no fault of their own. 2. a prison or imprisonment 3. a place or condition of neglect or oblivion to which unwanted things or persons are exiled Limbo i.e. Homeroom

*R*emembering my first brush with homeroom . . . I wandered into my desolate 3rd period class, and the teacher told me with a pitying look, "You must go to homeroom now". Shocked, I questioned, "But why? What have I done?"

"It's not your fault, he sadly informed me, patting me on the shoulder.

As I made my way toward homeroom, I felt slightly ill with an unredeemed dread, thinking of my impending initiation.

Nevertheless, I boldly made my way into the gloomy abode. There I discovered the cries and gnashing of teeth of those who, like me, begged an explanation of their dilemma.

Midst the havoc, I heard a distant voice apparently coming from a box on the wall. Perhaps the solution to our plea. I gave up trying to hear the possibly crucial words over the din of hostility. Then an icy silence covered the room like a blanket, and what had been a vague fear actually began to happen.

One yawn, another, and yet another were heard. Quickly, the contagious disease spread to every person and, inevitably, heads began to nod.

Yes, what I had but feared began to occur . . . ; the class would die of boredom.

During the bi-weekly homeroom meetings, activities may range from card games (top), to napping (middle) to the sheer boredom of not being able to sleep because of the noise (bottom).

oin Wayne's Galloping Gourmet for a gallop through a typical week of lunches.

Monday had an All-American atmosphere. We ate our choice of America's Favorite, hotdogs, or their unique soyburgers—a savory blend of soybeans and an unknown type of fatty protein. The burgers tended to be rather dry, probably to spur beverage sales.

On Tuesday we found the homey mood of Italy. The delicious aroma of pizza and spicy lasagna filled our nostrils. Although the pizza did taste rather like cardboard and the lasagna seemed warmed over we'll overlook it, for now.

Wednesday, the school fasts, very intriguing.

Thursday was back to those savory blends, this time in a quaint Mexican setting. Tacos, with unidentifiable fillings, spice-up this menu. Well, it can be overlooked.

On Friday you can almost hear the surf; it's seafood day! Though the aroma of their breaded fish will last for approximately 3 days, after the weekend and can be overlooked.

Even though the cafeteria created a different atmosphere for each day, they still managed to keep a stable frigid temperature of food (and students) and can, therefore, be overlooked.

The average lunch begins as it ends, crowded, unless like the person pictured, you wait till the end of the module. After cleverly finding a niche for a tray and finally handing it in, one can join the crowd in the commons.

Craftsmen

With rapidly moving technology, the overwhelming majority of those whose schooldays are over, find the separate societies of the "real world" and the high school world farther and farther apart. It seems as if more than time separates the reality of job hunting, the 9:00 to 5:00 grind to retirement, and high school, where day to day living revolves around homework and tests and all roads lead to graduation—and stop.

Covered with wood shavings, Tim Haag shapes his project on the school's lathe during Woodworking class.

Turning a bowl, Danny Wilson shapes a block of wood into his next project in Shop class.

Too often school programs are directed toward graduation and not what follows. Keeping this in mind the school system developed vocational training programs: beginning with classes like Shop, DECA, and Work Study; finally growing into the Regional Vocational Center (R.V.C.). Too often the only way "R.V.C. going" generals are noticed is by their absence from Wayne, but over 10% of Wayne go to R.V.C., a group as large as half the senior class.

Vocational training starts at Wayne as Home Ec, Shop Class, Woods, Metals, Electronics, and Auto Mechanics; and advances to such R.V.C. courses as Food and Health, On-site construction, Automotive repair, with trucks supplied from North American Van Lines, and on the job Data Processing.

With fewer high school graduates going to colleges and tuition more expensive than ever, unskilled jobs become harder to find. High schools should give students the basic education needed for such a society—the R.V.C. does!

THE ROAD TO FINALE & SMALL TOWN

Lights and noise fade, the curtains open light floods upon the stage, and the play is begun. Before the final curtain a cast of unseen technicians devote as much effort as the actors, yet their only accolade may be "Well, nice set." But it's all part of the job undertaken, as J.R.R. Tolkien said, "All that is gold does not glitter."

Highlighting the 76-77 year, Wayne had the exclusive, limited showing of Mr. James Garver. To his credit Mr. Garver taught two drama classes, three stagecraft classes while performing "Scapino" and "Damn Yankees". Perhaps the strongest side of the department was the set construction. Although this was Mr. Garver's first year teaching, the sets constructed were the most creative and elaborate ever on the Wayne stage. With platforms borrowed from the Civic, the entire "Scapino" set was elevated three, four, and five feet above the stage level.

But alas, Mr. Garver has taken a corporate venture into that misty void beyond Wayne. For the fourth consecutive year our drama director has played for only a year, then the show's on the road. So we are proud to present to you the 77-78 Wayne drama director, Mr. Ken Perkins—direct from a sellout engagement at Miami Jr. High. Welcome my friends to the show that never ends.

With masterful strokes, sophomore Evelyn Belcher assists in the enormous task of building and painting sets for the musical "Damn Yankees".

NEW FACES IN ART

Co-existing in the H-wing with the Performing Arts segment of the Fine Arts department is Wayne's contribution to the art world, newly expanded with freshmen artists. As adding ten more periods to Ms. Thexton's class schedule did not seem feasible, the students were followed by two new art teachers, Mrs.

Johnathon Platt.

Honored by the art department this year for outstanding achievement in art were; Lora Johnson, Rebecca Mattes, and Andrew Werling. Extreme variety was what could be noticed this year. Even in the same room one would make papier mache fish, while another a 9-ft. paint brush for the prom.

For a demonstration, Dennis Helmke consults Mr. John Platt concerning his papier mache project.

Sculpting small animals out of plaster is long and tedious, but after completion it is very rewarding.

Working intently on her rug, sophomore Delores Davenport completes one of her projects for Mr. Platt.

Poster paint—the exercise of the day—is perfected by junior Diane Wortley.

Goodbye,

Concert Choir

Treble Choir

Mr. Nick!

The music faded slowly into the silence of thought, anxious all hands waited until that sharp cutoff that rarely left any doubt whether to stand and cheer. He orchestrated the audience with the same relentless precision that he directed the choir. His raised hand held his audiences in an unbreakable silence, all eyes riveted on the choir and on him. He was in command and all knew it, and loved it. Good bye, Good bye Mr. Nick.

instrumentalists

Tense, hushed musicians nervously assembled instruments of cold, highly polished brass, plastic, and wood. Crowded into a New Haven High School classroom, eighty members of the Wayne Concert Band meticulously examined their uniforms of navy blue, making sure that the funny little red ties were correctly positioned on their white shirts. It wasn't an average Friday evening for these four score dedicated Generals. It was the culmination of weeks of preparation for the annual N.I.S.B.O.V.A. (Northern Indiana School Band, Orchestra, and Vocal Association) concert band contest and everything had to be as perfect as possible.

The Concert Choir went through a very similar ordeal at the same place on the following morning of the busy late April weekend. These sixty singers also wanted everything to be flawless, but they had an extra incentive to strive for perfection; a five-year tradition of receiving superior (I) ratings. Under the direction of Mr. Carl Nicholas, the choir refused to break tradition, bringing home yet another superior plaque. The band garnered a respectable excellent (II) score.

At the Spring Music Banquet graduating students were recognized for their leadership and outstanding participation with the Wayne Band Award, Wayne Choir Award, and the Wayne Orchestra Award. Band honors were divided among instrumentalists, Jay Farlow and Cindy Grieder. Receiving the choir trophy was senior vocalist Scott Marquardt and concertmistress Gretchen Schneider was presented the orchestra award.

One final part of the music department that is somewhat unfamiliar to most of Wayne but one which is growing in popularity is the electronic music program. Here students learned to create a brand new form of music using synthesizers and tape recorders. The group put on "Elecumus IV" a concert of their original compositions in early June where Kim Scott was presented with the Brent Pfeiffer Memorial Electronic Music Award.

Art Deco—nature submerged in geometry. Administration — nature submerged in paper. For each book or desk, net or hot dog, some administrator somewhere has poured over mounds of paper, layers of paper, paper echoing paper, like the layered, echoing lines of the following art deco pages. But style is only one aspect of our administration, for they touch us in many ways. They collar us in the hall sending us back to the commons and even, on occasion, sit down with us and have lunch.

The man — Old Glory, our faithful standard flying the halls of Wayne. If somebody died I think he'd stand at half-mast. Though, if Wayne had a face, it would be his.

The school has a definite character; outside, I see Mr.

Though earlier in the book we poked gentle fun at our lunch-time administrators, we must admit that they kept the wolves from our stomach doors each and every day of our lives at Wayne. Against the often impossible odds of short supply, our intrepid cooks whipped-up balanced meals to keep us dietetically on the straight and narrow. While the cooks fed our bodies, the counselors guided our minds through the maze of courses that faced us all. On occasion they also guided us along the "paths of righteousness for our own sakes, even unto the valley of the shadow of detention," while others made sure that financial and economic matters went smoothly.

Typewriters and study halls, telephones and cafeteria tables, book lists and memos are all the province of the aides of Wayne High School. Our aides performed admirably, freeing teachers and secretaries and cooks for other duties. All the while, the custodians, as usual taken for granted, made our building clean and livable, putting it in good running order.

Approaching school from the buildings point of view, students are simply a stream shuffling through. Far more familiar are the unchanging faces of the technicians behind the organization, installation, and maintenance. 2:35 comes and people still work within. Summer comes and still the school is not empty. Our six bells signify just a small percentage of the time that is put into "running" the school.

While numbers depersonalize, it still takes people to instill regularities in a school.

Rummaging through the award cabinets, it seems very much like reading names out of a history book—a glimmer of recognition here and there, but little personal familiarity.

In a relatively new school, tradition flows slowly; I can easily recall when six distant years ago Wayne was new, but reading the years tradition has dripped its remains here.

Encased in chrome and glass cabinets,
moss can still grow.

One For The Road

filled suddenly and fully to our hearts. We exchanged roses and memories. We exchanged promises and feelings. The ending of our high school bonds and the challenge we were to face as a class '77. Memories rich and invaluable. A duty as important as to act as witnesses to the future and as precious as the past.

We considered none of this that night, for our souls were full of apprehension and excitement, a fear of the unknown. When our Commencement exercises reached their conclusion, we would lose the security of high school and be forced to confront the uncertainty that is life.

We exchanged little conversation during the ceremony. The air about us was unusually quiet and reserved. We bowed our heads during the invocation together, we sang the National Anthem together, and we listened to the various addresses together. As Valedictorian Tim Hunkler aptly told us, they would be the last things we would do together.

Eventually our collective torture was ended and we received our diplomas.

A black and white photograph showing a massive crowd of people gathered in front of the U.S. Capitol building. The crowd is dense, filling the foreground and middle ground, with many people standing in rows. The Capitol building's iconic dome and neoclassical architecture are visible in the background.

We went outside into the chilled night air, leaving the congestion of the Coliseum behind, as well as those friends. Our hearts were heavy, there were lumps in our throats, and tears still stained our cheeks. Just as we were saddened, so were we excited. The future seemed limitless and unexplored. It is there for the wise to enjoy, and the senseless to ignore.

Juniors juggle

For those who would rather write than act, the juniors were again swarming, like bees around the pub room. Amy Drees was news editor of the Dispatch. Joe Andrew was editor-in-chief of the First Real Earth Catalog, Cris Burke co-editor of activities, Hayden Schultz editor of academics, and Joe Billman head photographer.

Jeff Specht, head of Wayne Birgade, boosted spirit by selling buttons and hats with the "whoopee wagon." Sue Metzger raised money for her class by leading the way in the Tootsie Roll and M&M sales. The money went toward the school's first banner and the Prom. Laura Rudney and Diane Wortley

"colored" the Prom with a "world" of beauty.

Though academics is dominated by juniors, the same juniors do most of the activities. After two years of high school many would rather complain and do nothing, as others would rather do everything. Sometimes getting carried away in both respects.

(Lt.) Junior Joe Billman, armed with camera for Higher Education Night, looks for a college that can cater to his special needs.

(Blw. Lt.) In the commons after lunch, Anne Able & Sue Metzger laugh as they discuss money-making projects for their class.

(Md. Lt.) Junior Joe Andrew gets himself into character for an important speech meet. Team captain, he advanced to state competition.

Jazzin' Juniors

Quantities of juniors showed pep for the class of '78. Seven of the eleven cheerleaders were juniors; Kay Nunn and Carolyn Lockett, varsity; Karen Kruse, Laura Steinforth, Lee Goldner, Alicia Dennis, and Rhonda Hey.

Student council had a strong showing from the junior class. Sue Mileff, class president led many skits at pep sessions. Laura Rudny, Melvin Boyd, Anne Able, and Cris Burke helped with many council projects.

(Rt.) Student Council member Laura Rudney looks at what collages offer her on Higher Education Night at Wayne.

Perhaps the most spirited class at Wayne this year were the sophomores. The biggest spirit project tackled by President Chris Lebamoff, Vice President Bob Prezbindowski, and Secretary-Treasurer Mark Summers was the Big Blue Machine. It's duties ranged from producing the perfect coach, to eating, digesting, and leaving little "remains" of the

As in previous years the sophomores sold light bulbs, and held paper drives. A long term spirit-booster was the bronze General stick-pin.

Spirited Sophs

In February, Jostens came to Wayne in hopes of finding school spirit; and did they find it! They selected Wayne as a Spirit Showcase school. They interviewed the spirit committee about the things which the sophomores have done; including "Winter Wonderland" which won first place in the Deck the Halls Christmas Decoration Contest. Tracy Dennis became "Gen for a Day" because of her efforts. Plus, the "Red and Blue Hall of Fame" which had figures of each varsity player, and their autographs, and facts about each player. They photographed the Big Blue Machine and the Elmhurst pep session. They discussed spirit and asked how they could help the class in their quest to be the best.

Frosh don't fumble

The class of "80" spilled many prospective athletes onto the Wayne scene. The cross country team ran into some luck when they met Kenton Bailey. He was the only freshmen on the varsity squad all year, setting almost unbeatable records. Kent was also the only freshmen to receive a letter this year.

The frosh wrestling team also boasted three exceptional wrestlers, Dave Wilson, Alan Hallback, and Brad Manes, who ended the season undefeated, all with firsts in city. Although the ninth grade basketball team had a dismal season, Vaughn Starks led the team in scoring and rebounds. In football, Andy Lebamoff, (one of the best quarterbacks in the city), led the frosh to a third in the city.

Fired up

Freshmen displayed their spirit and enthusiasm in many ways. Their favorite pep session skit was A.D. (80), the wonder horse, who delighted many with his amazing stunts and gags. The freshmen class, led by president Andy Buroker and vice president Melinda Cooper promoted spirit with their successful visor and logo button sales. Also Michelle Ort sketched a picture of each member of the Varsity basketball team.

Frogs & Freshmen

A few frogs revoltingly stick out their tongues out at the surprised freshmen, while the frosh ripped off their wart-covered skin.

Yes, first attempts at scientific procedure are met with eager anticipation by unassuming freshmen as with their initial endeavor they collectively slit, sever, slice, and slash thirty two and a half frogs. The result of these varied autopsies would make any self respecting frog croak.

freshman. Robyn Worman was the only freshman to go to Nisbova State Contest, where she received a first, but many others received high marks at city.

Journalist freshmen, Sue Andorfer, Lori Leamon, and Charlene McIntosh contribute much to the "pub" room in the forms of ideas, noise and clutter.

Keeping the student body abreast of the daily activities and events occurring around Wayne High School is a titanic task at its best. At its worst, it is nerve-shattering. Two basic ways exist to inform the students: a) the notorious morning announcements, and b) the utilization of the DISPATCH.

Operating out of the equally notorious Publications Room, DISPATCH staffers worked tirelessly throughout the year, interviewing and pasting-up in an insane effort to publish their bi-monthly newsmagazine. Left in charge of this chaotic mass of humanity was Editor-In-Chief Colleen O'Connor who, with the able assistance of Fred Borkowski, Amy Drees, and Linda Bushey, always managed to get the paper out on time.

Although the number of subscriptions sold was low, the staff's effort was inversely proportional to sales in producing the DISPATCH. Hardworking news writers Diane Holloway and Sue Andorfer, and Steve Borkowski of the ever-growing sports section put in almost as many hours as the editors. And finally cartooning his way into the hearts of editors and subscribers was Andy C. Werling.

a 'reality' like*

This is merely a personal note to those people that saw the Catalog go from concert to reality. Those people who laughed at first and then, in the end, cried when parting.

Just for a breathless glimmer of a year, a group emerged, devoted not just to a yearbook, not just to a good time, but to each other. The elite became the groundlings, the pampered/the pampering.

The book is filled with us and with the moods and feelings of 1977.

Thanks again.

Do I dare to eat a peach?

"Have you seen Joe lately?"

"Joe who?"

"Joe Momma!"

"Eternity is a mere moment, just long enough for a joke."

"It was a dark and stormy night when Joe Momma turned to me and said, 'A chicken in every pot is never having to say you're sorry."

"Understanding (then and only then) I asked, 'Do you remember the laughs?' The bad jokes, the crude jokes, the good jokes, the pies in the face, the clutz falling, sprawling, and those 'Freudian slips' . All those wacky, funky, silly, crude, things that all of us laughed at continually.

"Life is a dirty joke, just long enough for us to understand the punchline."

Like sweet honey dripping on an electric blue plate, our smiles, our honey, our personality. Our character is the contrast between our honey and our plates.

Remember

How does an artist draw a joke? How does a writer describe a smile? What triggers that muscle spasm that is a giggle or a rocketing laugh.

But—

When we look back we tend not to remember the laughs but only the anxiety, only the tears. Maybe it's because the laughs are so temporary and so transient.

Or maybe we put them away, hidden in the recesses of our minds, like gum stuck on the bottom of a movie theatre seat.

An old joke is a bad joke, but an old laugh is like a an old wine, they warm and grow in color until a giggle becomes a roaring laugh, that kind of laugh that forces tears into your eyes and leaves you gasping for breath.

Life at Wayne was fun this year, and it was fun the year before and will be fun next year. That somehow makes it all worthwhile, makes it worth the horrible tests, teachers and grades. You can live with the rules and regulations, the setbacks and refusals ONLY IF they let you laugh.

Rippling energy

The clouds stopped in a rigid impatient stance. The sun cast long slicing shafts of light forcing sharp shadows under the rim of his absorbing cap, tight from dragging sweat from his forehead.

A breeze tossed his hair, revealing strained eyes, etched in tension steadfastly aimed at the enemy behind the bat. His brain clicked systematically going through the compiled knowledge of hundreds of practices. With an instinctive glance at each team-mate, all posed and guarding, his breath stopped. Their eyes meet, spanned back, each having understood, each aimed again.

An anxious quiver striped his face. In a slow crescendo each muscle rippled with strength, stained, taut, pulling away from matter, transforming itself into potential energy, a hurricane spin, every pore of his tense body lashing out it's energy, vibrating into a blurring ball of leather, rocketing toward the plate.

The blonde grain of new wood cracked, screaming in pain, echoing in the erupting crowd.

The muscular, sinew, gushed with life, tensed, dived, stretching, reaching, grasping across that short space between a dream and a reality. Then the smack of leather hitting leather, the relieved body hitting the ground, the cheers hitting the electric air.

A callused hand brushes the dust off a sweat stained knee, wiping the tinge of blood off the wrist, swipes away the limp hair and with a slow, growing sardonic grin, he starts the mad process again.

Those that have touched

The two of you walked among the daisies holding hands. She smiled, you laughed. The flowers somehow ended up in her hands. Huh, if only the guys could see you now—Romeo and Juliet—Thank God they couldn't hey, would you like to step out on my balcony for a little . . .

Who touched you here at Wayne? Why will a tear come to your eye when you graduate? Is it those brick walls, or is it someone who walked these halls, a person like a summer breeze, here for only a moment, lovely, laughing, lasting only in your mind.

They didn't leave any footprints to follow. You're not sure where they went, or what they were. But you have this empty pocket feeling of losing something, someone, sometime.

We're here at Wayne for a short time, just another truckstop on a long haul of moth-eaten holes in your memory.

What is important is having someplace to scribble those close, intimate, flavorful, memories of the year—this is it—the place for the hands you've heard, the laughs you've touched, the sweet daisies you've seen. The truckstops neon lights, screaming hints of our memories, bringing those people back we wished to forget. The plastic canned tears on the T.V. draw back those lost flowers, daisies that wilted and we dropped.

Look at your face in the restroom mirror, is that your face or the face of a conglomeration of all those people you've touched, all those people you've cried with. Those that left a nick in your mind. We leave—only then remembering the flowers sitting on the tables, the beauty among the grease, that face in the mirror.

Thank you Wayne for bringing us all together, Thank you for letting us gain something to lose.

Remember

THE LAST DETAIL

We've grown up. Yellowed and mellowed, our feelings developing straight and tall, surrounded by our peers but like those around us still waving in the wind. We've been taught to survive, to stand tall only in a crowd and then to bend in the wind, not to challenge but to obey. But is that all? Can one be taught to stand alone? Can one be taught an experience or can one only be taught a useful practical end. Is survival more practical than challenging?

Like the old woman challenging the weeds, challenge these questions. Like chafed seeds carried by the wind we leave Wayne.

But after—
What will we remember?
What will stick with us?
It is not Homecomings or Proms, not broad ideas or themes like "Apathy" or "Pep" but the details we will remember. The five minute smiles, the lone dripping tear, the instant your hand touched hero. We will remember a moment. We remember not usefulness, but experience. Not those hundreds of practical things we've gathered, but the few strands of wheat in a lonely woman's calloused hand. Not instant, just add tears, T.V. dinner memories, but ones slowly brewed and slowly toasted—those that are ingrained deepest in the heart.

Experience is always a means, seldom an end. And in the end it has been said that the only time that we really ever live in the present is when we surrender ourselves to the moment and enjoy it. Instead of always planning the future one should sit in the middle of a field at sunset and forget your troubles and to smell the wheat around you, watch the clouds go by to remember all the details that make that field THAT field, or maybe just maybe sit back and just gaze at a part of your life, just gaze at your book. life's story is etched in ink—it can't be erased.

Restroom Walls and

Their intricate designs stretching ever-higher; each brick supports those above it and rests on those below it. Walls tower above our heads but not above our ideals.

These barriers always exist, blocking our mental paths as well as the physical ones. Students constantly encounter walls at Wayne, and will continue to do so for the remainder of their lives. You've come to a complete mental standstill, no place to turn; trapped; ready to be conveniently gift-wrapped and shipped off to the nearest asylum, when sudden inspiration comes from a restroom wall. Scribbled haphazardly in aging ink "The End is Near." Any end is merely another wall to be scaled, tunneled under, or simply avoided. Life is infinite . . . as long as you can scale the walls.

Every child has wanted to leave his mark on the world, usually on walls; whether they be covered with fancy wallpaper, or another child's message. We, even as children, take our frustrations on walls; the symbol of captivity. The captivity we loath. They limit us, further trapping our infinite minds inside very finite bodies.

Remember

Rickety Stairs

Escaping the boundry of walls is not their only purpose. Entering them, we may form a protective wall about our true personalities and feeling. Generally the only way to escape is up and out, if it is an escape that is truly desired.

Just as a book's story is not trapped between its cover; the contents may be converted to thought and returned to paper; so are true feelings untrapped between the walls. Friends and acquaintances may enter our mental walls and depart, taking with them some of our thoughts and incorporating them into their personalities. We in return do the same.

Perhaps the 1977 FIRST REAL EARTH CATALOG will be your inspiring rest-room wall. Remember X marks the spot—The spot where even the end must begin, the real earth.

WAYNE HIGH SCHOOL

We believed in the green light, the organic future that year by year recedes before us. It lured us then, but it has no matter. Tomorrow we will run faster, stretch our arms farther. And one fine morning, so we beat on, boats against the current, borne back ceaselessly into the past.

—F. Scott Fitzgerald
